

Alphabetizing Is Not For Sissies

Some people might call it a problem - an issue that one might want to address with a certified professional, maybe even consider taking medicine to correct. I say - why? Since when did making order out of chaos become something to be condemned? As if living in an orderly world was the cause of insanity instead of the other way around? So I alphabetize everything - my CDs, my DVDs, my books, and my boxes of cereal - big deal! What is so wrong with knowing exactly where to find something? Is it saner to frantically search through thrown-about items, therefore wasting time and energy? Why is it that my friends and family members find it humorous to rearrange my things? Do I, on the other hand, find humor in trashing their stuff? Of course not! I would never subject someone to a life of disarray! Nor would I find it the least bit funny! Chaos is not a goal, it's a symptom! A symptom of underlying issues - laziness, inferiority, low self-esteem! Slobs on the outside, complete messes on the inside! I am not the one in need of therapy, people! It is you - the cluttered and the lazy - who need to wake up and examine yourselves! It's not too late! There is more to life than the chaos you have created! I promise you this - you, too, can have a life of order and organization! You, too, can alphabetize!
